BRIEFLY DESCRIBING BURBANK'S NEW GIANT HYBRID AMARYLLIS

(HIPPEASTRUM HYBRIDUM)

The genus Amaryllis contains above fifty species according to most botanists. All are classified as tropical South American bulbous plants, but my collectors in the Cordilleran Andes have sent me many beautiful dwarf hippeastrums from far south in Chile, almost to the botanically unexplored Patagonian forests.

Thirty years ago my work commenced on the hippeastrums or Amaryllis, as they are more commonly called, and though I have sold from time to time the more ordinary kinds of my seedlings having quite large flowers to the seedsmen and florists, yet have kept the very best varieties for increase and to name and introduce later, and now have a good stock of each of these distinct new varieties; the cream of the hundreds of thousands which have been raised during all these years.

All florists, both European and American, who have seen these new ones on my Santa Rosa grounds when in bloom, agree that they are on the whole the finest in existence anywhere without exception.

This rare collection is now, for the first time, offered==each variety with complete control including all the bulbs in existence. In other words, the varieties are sold very much as a patent is---the purchaser has absolute control of the varieties purchased.

It would give me great pleasure to introduce these at retail, but it is impossible on account of the time and attention required. This will be the last opportunity ever offered to purchase this collection or any part of it. Nearly everybody knows of it, but no one poses=ses a single bulb of any variety of this whole collection, though I have sold the more ordinary varieties to the florists for many years.

These bulbs are Winter bloomers and are best moved during the Fall and early winter, before strong growth commences. They make enormous bulbs, enormous flowers and generally multiply much more rapidly by offsets than any of the ordinary Amaryllis. The lasting qualities of this new strain is remarkable. The flowers when cut often lasting in perfecrion for ten or twelve days.

The descriptions are brief, but accurate, and the bulbs will produce the flowers as described or even much better, if well cared for. This list is terse as it has been prepared when other duties required attention.

The nominal price for which each of these new varieties can be purchased is added. All, without reserve, are now for the first time available. The number of bulbs mentioned with each variety embraces the large older bulbs and the offsets which have appeared above ground at this time. Usually there are several or many bulblets and small bulbs which have not appeared at the surface.

SAMPLE OF THE LIGHTER SHADES IN THE OPEN FIELD

A NEW HYBRID AMARYLLIS ---- MARTINIQUE

A remarkable new hybrid of the Sprekelia Formosissima or Jacobean lily with the Amaryllis (Hippeastrum) Vittata. One of the most unique hybrids which has been produced among the bulbous plants. The flowers are fiery crimson like those of the Jacobean lily but very much larger, being nine inches in diameter, but even more remarkable are the long curious twisted petals which give the flowers a strange appearance, not found anywhere else among the Amaryllidae. Leaves pale green, upright, strap shape, 1 inch wide, 18 to 20 inches long. Flowers fiery crimson on slender stems 1½ to 2 feet long. Usually two flowers to each stem.

I have now produced 58 large bulbs and 57 small ones of this new hybrid. Price for the whole stock without reserve, $350.

Seed capsules are produced abundantly but rarely a variable seed. Have so far secured twelve from which are now growing twelve seedling bulbs, which are now large enough to bloom next season. Price of the twelve $240.
